UFAA CELEBRATES TWO RETIRING STAFF IN A NIGHT OF GRATITUDE AND LEGACY

For the Unclaimed Financial Assets Authority (UFAA), reuniting rightful owners with 'lost and found' millions is only half the story. The other half happens behind closed doors: the quiet professionalism, the institutional memory, and the human bonds that make an organisation thrive.

That human side took centre stage recently when the Authority hosted a retirement and farewell dinner at Eka Hotel in Nairobi, honouring two long-serving colleagues: Caroline Chirchir, outgoing Manager of Human Resource and Administration, and David Kamau, outgoing Corporation Secretary.

The event, themed "Honouring a Legacy of Dedicated Service and Excellence," brought together members of the Board, staff, and family to celebrate not just careers, but the people behind them.

The dinner was a deliberate expression of the Authority's people-centred organisational culture grounded in teamwork, recognition, appreciation, and professionalism.

The event was a celebration of shared experiences and the quiet pride of public service.

Caroline and David depart after years of service that helped shape UFAA's internal systems and governance framework.

Speaking during the dinner, UFAA CEO and Managing Trustee, Laban Molonko, paid tribute to both individuals as foundational pillars on which UFAA stand today.

"Both of our departing colleagues have left a lasting mark in this organisation," Molonko said. "Their professionalism, institutional knowledge, and commitment to service have contributed greatly to the stability and growth of the Authority. The systems they helped establish and the guidance they provided will continue to benefit the organisation well into the future."

The farewell also underscored a broader human truth: retirement is not an end but a transition. The relationships built, the knowledge shared, and the culture nurtured persist long after the desk is cleared.
